"In War, the State Is All, The Individual Nothing"

Dr. Max Nordau, War Prisoner, Denounces Fetich, Which in Times of Strife Reduces Man to a Degraded Tool.

By DR. MAX NORDAU.

(This is the-first of two new articles by Max Nordau, the eminent scientist and historian, condemning the fetish of "organization," writ-ten for The Washington Herald. They have heightened interest because Dr. Nordau was interned by the French on account of his Teu-ton birth. He was recently paroled for his dis-tinguished services, and is now living in Madrid.

Is it the function and the end of the state to render the life of each citizen more secure, easier, more fruitful, hap-pier, by means of order, of justice, of the enforcing of criminal and civil war, of the execution of great public works which lie beyond the possibilities of individuals or small groups? Is it the duty of the citizen to sacrifice his ease, his happinese, his fortune, his powers, his life to the State without expecting any present or future advantage himself or his family, without the right of asking for what useful and plausible purpose he ought to make all the sacri-fices exacted from him?

Individual Entirely Subordinate.

There is in sociology a school called the "Organiciat" which asserts that the individual has no existence at all, that he comes into being only by the body politic and as an entirely subordinate, non-autonomous particle of the community, that he state, that we have to look upon as upon a living organism in look upon as upon a living organism in look upon as upon a living organism in separated from it has a sittle meaning as a cell extracted from a man or from a warm bifolded animal. In time of peace this subject might be end glacused and debated acad-emically, if war time it ceases to be a matterl of debate. The question is settled. Halp his train-bearer Hegen, the organities triumph.

tinguished services, and is now living in Madrid).

For thousands of years the relation of the individual to the State has been the colject of philosophical speculation. Does the State exist for the benefit of the individual? Does the individual exist to be used up, to be spent up by the State? Is it the function and the end of the Plafo entertains no doubt as to the reply upon these questions. The State is to real the State is and the state all the rights, to the individual all the duties. War Suffers No Individualism.

The annihilation of the individual, his drowning in the body politic, is fully justified if it is admitted that the end of

State is to maintain itself and to attain the highest possible degree of power, authority, splendor and glory.

A directly opposite standpoint is taken by Herbert Spencer. He proclaims the redeeming doctrine that the individual is his own end, that man is created for man, that the State, in order to justify its being, is bound to further all the interests of the individual.

State is to maintain itself and to attain as the and place of their acts of prowess and to obey a general plan if the valor was not to be stricken with bareness.

In our time of scientific warfare it is unthinkable. A single will must move the whole national organism, a single mind must think, judge, scheme for all, a single executive must dispose of all resources of the whole nation.

Pictures Insured.

It has remained for the firm of Corey & Riter to furnish a star with advertising matter of so great value that it has been insured. Had this advertising matter been press agent's "copy" one might readily understand the precaution of taking out fire insurance upon it. In this case, however, the risk is portraits. Few American actresses have been so often made the subject of portraiture at the hands of famous artists as Mrs. Fiske, and the plan of Messrs. Corey & Riter is to have five of the best of these portraits accompany her on tour, each picture being insured for exhibition in the principal galleries of the cities in which she is to appear.

Cinema Star's Salary.

De Wolf Hopper said at an al fresco luncheon in Los Angeles: "The biggest fake in the theatrical world today is the cinema star's salary. Why, if you believed all you hear you'd think every Tom. Dick and Harry in the cinema world made half a million a year.

"I know a second heavy who believed these cinema yarns and applied to a cinema manager for a job.

"What salary do you expect?" the many 'What salary do you expect?' the manager asked.

"'O,' said the second heavy, 'about $525 to begin with." "The manager pursued up his lips, thought a minute, and then said: "Knock off the odd hundreds and I'll engage you."

Learn to Decide Quickly.

In the American Magazine is the story of a successful business man who attributes his success largely to his faculty for making quick decisions.

"Once decided, you ought not to waste time. If a man decides rightly, then he has a running start on rivals who hesitate. If he decides wrongly, then he has discovered his blunder, backed up, and is ready to start on even terms with the hesitating rival, for a man of decision can decide he is right. Also, in a greater number of cases, the man who decides quickly may fail to decide the best to all representatives to make immediate way, and still carry it through to sucsettlement for tickets.
